Introducing
Piano Instructor
Victoria Dolceamore

Originally from Atlantic City, Victoria who grew up in Linwood and Longport, started playing piano when she was 4 years old with her grandmother and began formal lessons at age 6. Music has always been a passion throughout Victoria's life. While in college in New Orleans, Victoria taught piano and played keyboards & piano in a variety of bands and was also involved with music composition in undergraduate and graduate school. Victoria furthered her education and attended USC and studied Film Scoring and became an active film composer for many years as well as a piano teacher with a roster of 15 students in Los Angeles from 1997-2007. Victoria eventually took a hiatus and worked in higher education at Pepperdine University for 10 years as well as 3 years at the University of New Haven in Connecticut while spending time with her family. Victoria has since returned to the area and is excited to continue teaching piano!
